RESULT

Cerebellar Abiotrophy (CA)	N/N
Lavender Foal Syndrome (LFS)	N/N
Occipitoatlantoaxial Malformation (OAAM)	N/N
Severe Combined Immunodeficiency (SCID)	N/N

INTERPRETATION

Normal: horse does not possess the mutation associated with CA.

Normal: horse does not have the LFS gene.

No copies of the OAAM mutation; horse is normal.

No copies of the SCID mutation; horse is normal.

What Do These Results Mean for a Mare Owner?

These results mean that Marbach RCA is NOT a carrier for any of these recessive genetic traits. It also means that you as a mare owner, do not need to test your mare before you breed to Marbach RCA.

If your mare is a carrier of one of these traits, which means that she carries one copy of the gene/mutation, there is a 25% chance that a foal born of this mating will also be a carrier.

There is NO CHANCE that a foal would have the disease/mutation.

This means that you can safely breed any mare to Marbach RCA without worrying about any health issues for the resulting foal.

RED FACTOR	E/e	Both black and red factors detected.
AGOUTI	A/a	1 copy of agouti. If present, black pigment is restricted to the points.

What Do These Results Mean to a Mare Owner?

Imagine breeding a black mare to a bay stallion and having a chestnut foal. You might be wondering; how did this happen? The answer lies in coat color genetics.

A heterozygous red-carrier bay stallion means that he can produce a chestnut horse, depending on the color genetics of your mare (i.e., does she also carry the red factor?).

The agouti gene determines if the black is spread across the body or restricted to the points (i.e., mane, tail, feet, etc.). For example, you breed a bay mare to Marbach RCA, the mare has 1 copy of the agouti gene, the resulting foal has a 65% chance of being bay, a 22% chance of being black and a 13% chance of being chestnut.

For any questions about the color coat test you might have, you are welcome to contact our resident guru, Tara Maus at info@mausdesigns.com.

For more information, we also recommend UC Davis California's Genetics Laboratory. You can find information about equine coat color and learn how to test your mare to determine what color foals you might have. CLICK HERE to visit the UC Davis website.
